YOUR MOVE

BECAUSE I SAID SO.

Her mother hears backtalk.

Read the comic. Then make Eva's next move.

1 Something worth showing

Katete, outside Mbarara. Eva, 16, has been learning digital illustration for months.

SATURDAY MBARARA

3 A pencil should do

It's digital illustration. You can use it for book covers, posters, animation—

Eva, drawing is drawing. Get a pencil.

4 She did prepare

She has read the programme. Her teacher confirmed the invitation. Her aunt can take her and bring her home.

You start with a drawing. But there are things you do with layers, and —

WORKSHOP PROGRAMME

From my teacher

You are invited to the workshop. it will be a great opportunity.

Aunt

I can take you to Mbarara and bring you back.

Who told you all that?

5 Let me show you

I've been learning. Let me show you.

I went to school before you were born.

6 The question changes

I know, Mum. But this is something I've been studying.

So now you know more than your mother?

WORKSHOP PROGRAMME

7 A familiar worry

These things are a distraction. You have school. You should focus on real subjects.

8 She explains again

This is part of my future. I can use these skills after school.

9 Still not convinced

I don't think this workshop is necessary.

But it would help me learn properly.

10 A decision now

You can see why both of them feel this way. What should Eva do next?

WHAT SHOULD EVA DO NEXT?

Read the comic. Then make Eva's next move in the game.

PLAY THE GAME

YOUR MOVE

Eva knows something her mother has not examined. Her explanation has been treated as disrespect. What does she do?

CHALLENGE HER DIRECTLY

“About this subject, I do know more. Please look before deciding.”

WITHDRAW

“Okay, Mum.” Put the phone away and stop explaining.

TRY TO KEEP THE CONVERSATION OPEN

“You can still guide me. Can I first show you what I’ve learned?”

Make your choice in the game.

Uncle Rwamiti — the uncle your parents should probably never have introduced you to.

Eva and her family are fictional. The workshop is also fictional.
